CRUCES.

[From the St. Louis Republican, 10th.]

Local readers of the Republican have heretofore had only partial information regarding the early meeting, in their mildst, of the General Assemblines of toth the Old and New School Presbyterian Churches of the United States. As the day for their stiting is very near at hand, we deem if proper now to make our information a little more precise. This we do because much of the best cierical talent of the whole country will be present to prize in the proceedings and debates, and because the two assemblies have never met in session at the same time and place, in any previous year. The occasion, therefore, will have a double interest to the public at large, as well as the powerful religious s.cts who are immediately represented and and concerned. Many spectators will also be in attendance from uelghboring States, to which end numerous applications have already been made for rooms at the hotels. To make provision for the commissioners or being and there will be ample accommodation for all who may come. The railroud and steamboat lines have tendered the Commissioners or bell Assemblies halt-fare tlekets, and the hotels have liberally seconded the efforts of citizens to entertain the gnosts.

These strangers are from nearly every State in the Union, and represent the highest culture and refinement of the communities from whence they come. Visiting the West, many of them for the first time, they are likely to receive and carry away new and lasting impressions of the prosperity and rapid advancement they see around them. These impressions should be made as favorable ns possible, because their report, at a time when stiention is largely directed to Missouri, will be of incalculable benefit to St. Louis and the State at large.

We may here explain that the Assemblies constitute the highest form of government known to their respective church organized members of the Endagater with the control of the first without impression of the Penian organization altegether, or to give their apparent to another association priporting to subjugation of Canada, and in opport to the subjugation of Canada, and in opport to the wishes of James Stepheus, C. But I cannot read the language and not draw some inference from it, that at least it squints at the possibility of armed interference at some future time; and at the establishment, by means of Excentive power, of these reconstructed States in Congress, with a full quota of Representatives and Senators. The market, which had been exciled and snimated, was less active to-day, with a downward tendency in New York for both breadstaffs and provisions. Holders here, however, were quite firm for the latter, but were quiet for the former, and round lots of flour, though still weil snatafined, were feelily maintained. In pork there were no transactions, but bacon was fully up to former rates, with an advance on the choicer qualities of hams.
